And if a couple could identify their primary love language they could perhaps express their love for their partner and strengthen their relationship. Because Chapman's ideas were so popular, he later developed the Five Love Languages of Teenagers.

The 5 Love Languages and Your Teen | Focus on the Family

After more than 20 years of marriage and family counseling, I am convinced there are only five basic languages of love. Of these five, each teen has a primary love language, one that speaks more loudly and deeply to him or her. If a parent fails to speak this language adequately, the teen will not feel loved, regardless of other expressions of love.
